OFFERS

The Garden & DIY segment comprises over 600 advertisers, making it one of our largest verticals. The advertisers also differ in their offerings due to the broad range of products and the high number of offers.

Nevertheless, the market in the DIY & garden segment is highly competitive, which makes it even more important to be active with your own listings where the competition is.

DISTRIBUTION

The DIY & Garden vertical is very extensive and contains 12 different categories, each with further subcategories. You can find the five most popular categories here:

The volume is not the only decisive aspect, less heavily trafficked categories such as Bathroom & Sanitary are also performing excellently in our network.

REACH MORE HOBBY HOME MAKERS & GARDENERS THROUGH GOOGLE

Google is our strongest channel in the garden & DIY segment: 1/3 of all sales are generated via Google Shopping Ads, which makes Google an indispensable channel in the segment.

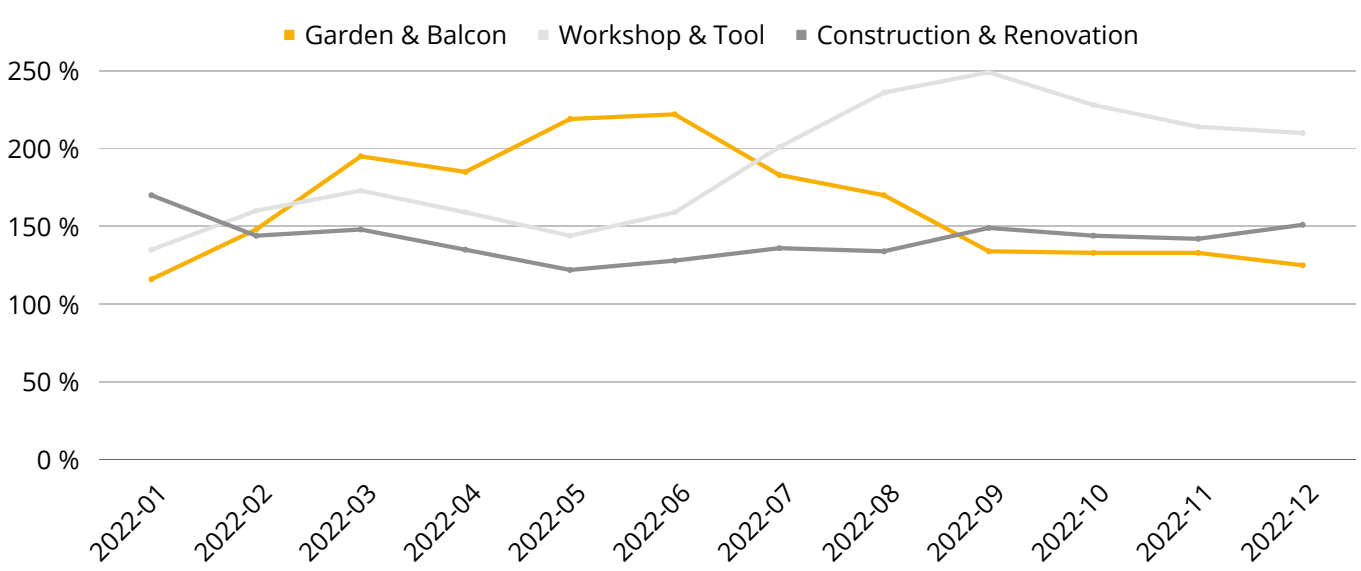

On the other hand, the Microsoft network should not be underestimated either: the volume here is lower, but the target group has greater purchasing power. The average shopping cart of Microsoft shoppers is two times higher in this segment.

SEASONALITY

The purchase rate can also be used to derive the seasonality of the vertical - overall, the seasonality of the DIY & Garden vertical is very balanced. However, the individual categories show very different trends with clear peaks and troughs.

The garden & balcony area is particularly in demand in the spring months, where it also reaches its peak values.

The workshop & tools segment runs in exactly the opposite direction to garden & balcony and enjoys the greatest demand in the months of Jun - Sep.

The construction and renovation category is quite balanced, but it is evident here that the winter months (Sep-March) are of greater interest.
